

Barack Obama is the nation's 44th president. Even during the first couple days at work, he was a great help. Among his goals, is making the economic crisis stop. His Inauguration Address was great. On his first day of work, he created 50,000 new jobs. He was said to change the nation.

There are some bad things about him, too. For example, he smoked the quit, though, and in his 17s and 18s, he didn't put much effort into his education. He went to Occidental, Columbia, and Harvard university. He studied law.

He was born in Honolulu, Hawaii. His dad, Barack Sr. was born in Kenya (in Africa). Lolo, his stepdad, was born in Indonesia. His mom was born in Wichita, Kansas. He has two half sisters, Auma and Maya. His grandpas are "Gramps" and Oniāgō. Obama fought against the black unfairness. He wrote the Harvard Law Review. His past jobs include a community helper and is a senator of Illinois for over one year. He wanted "Toot" to join his Inauguration, but she passed away one day before.

He married his wife, Michelle, in 1993. She went to Princeton University and Hartford University. Michelle gave birth to Malia and Sasha. She is a African-American, too.

I felt very excited on Inauguration Day. He's a good president, so far, I think he will continue his presidency as good as the first days.