

Barack Obama is really great. He will help us with our economy. He cares for health, school and many other things. He's caring and kind to all the people in Iraq. For example, he is ending the violent war in Iraq. Therefore he can save many people's lives. He is also very kind to his family. He tried to become president of the United States of America to make his father proud.

Barack Obama also brought his daughters a puppy now that they have room in the White House. Barack Obama gives great speeches too. Some of them are just like Martin Luther King Jr. President Barack Obama wants education for all of the world! He wants to help every one by fixing the world and ending horrible things from happening and he wants to start the United States all over again.

On January 20th 2009 he became the 44th African American President to move into the White House. I think he will do really great and he's going to have a lot of fun, but a lot of work as well.
