

I have a dream that all the people will have a nice home. That's because, I see some poor people sleep on the street wishing for food and money, to get a great house. I think the rich people will give them food and money. When the poor people get enough money, they could buy a house. Then they could buy some food.

I would love to give them money but I don't have money. So I give them food. President Obama will help too! I think he will give a speech about making houses less expensive—but not too cheap either! Then everybody ~~will~~ will have a great life and everybody won't be mad at each other. Then everybody will be happy forever!
