

My Dream...

I have a dream that people would stop global warming because it is bad for some animals and soon they will be extinct. Some fish can't lay their eggs in warm weather. If they can't lay eggs there won't be any babies. Maybe soon the parents might pass away and there won't be any more of that kind of fish.

Some animals, like walruses and polar bears, might not survive without cold weather. If the ice melts and the animals don't get off on time and there is some young animals who can't swim yet, the young might die.

Another way that global warming affects animals is ice melting and danger in the oceans. There could be raging storms, animals that might eat them, and maybe one of them might've run out of strength. This also happened in the movie "Arctic Tale!"
