

March

February 2009

Name: David Hsu (4th grade)

There was a countryside called March in an imaginary place where there were the animals that wanted to live there lived. On Every 60th to 61st day until the 91st or 92nd day of the year there was a war. There were peaceful animals and warlike animals. The warlike animals wanted war because they loved to battle. All the warlike animals were lions. All the peaceful animals were lambs. As you know, lions are fierce and lambs are gentle. At first, the lions were winning. They were biting, scratching, and pouncing on the lambs to kill them. But, later on, the lambs were talking the lions out of the war so they could forfeit. After that, any animal that isn't a lamb bows to a lamb when they see one.