

March's Weather Proverb

Name: Zoey Li 3rd Grade

The proverb "March comes in like a lion and out like a lamb" is very popular. In this essay I will tell you what this proverb means to me and where it comes from.

I think the proverb means that the weather is bad when March begins and the weather is nice and calm when March ends. I think the saying is true because when March starts, there is a lot of harsh wind and cold air, just like a lion. A lion is fierce just like the wind. When March is about to end there is warm air all around and soft breezes. Just like a lamb, warm air is nice and calm.

I think the saying about March and April comes from Ireland because, just like Ireland started the holiday of St. Patrick's Day, which is celebrated in March, the saying is also said for March.

I think people use this statement because the saying is true. If you think about it, you will recognize that March's weather does actually begin harshly and mean and by the end of March the weather is nice and calm. That is the reason why I think say this proverb.

I hoped you enjoyed reading about what I think about this proverb and I hope you agree with what I wrote about this saying.
